

Hessel Nieuwelink is a senior lecturer-researcher at the Amsterdam University of Applied Sciences (HvA). His PhD research focused on adolescents' views on and experiences with democracy and inequalities between students' opportunities to develop democratic attitudes. His current research focuses on how teachers deal with controversial issues in the classroom, how citizenship education takes form in urban settings and how schools can teach students about democracy in a meaningful way