

Nuria Liseth Mejía García. She has a Bachelor's degree in Sustainable Development Management and another one in Psychology. She is getting a Master's degree in Society and Political Research. She has a Diploma in International Democratic Institutions and Participatory Democracy.

She has 15 years of experience in development organizations in rural and urban Guatemala. She also has experience in political and organizational education for local impact and management as well as process systematization, planning and drive in sensitization campaigns and impact on conscious vote, participation of women, food sovereignty, agroecology, nutritious consumption, peasant markets, strengthening of the network of local and national organizations (specially young people and women).